The New Zealand Navy said it was standing by to make a dash to aid in the recovery. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has asked Australia's Parkes Radio Telescope to aid in picking up messages from the spacecraft. The telescope has three times the capacity of NASA's 85-footdiameter dishes near Canberra. Prayers Said Throughout The World

At Vatican, Ball Park And Wailing Wall

VATICAN CITY, April 15 (AP) -Pope Paul VI said today that he shared "the universal trepidation" surrounding the fate of America's Apollo-13

"We cannot forget at this moment the lot of the astronauts of Apollo-13," he told a general audience in St. Peter's Basilica. About 10,000 Romans and tourists were present. "We hope that at least their lives can be saved." the 72-year-old pontiff added.

"We understand the bitter-ness of the promoters of this venture and of the scientists behind it."

Prolonged applause greeted the Pope's remarks. This morning Pope Paul offered a special prayer during his mass for the safe return of astronauts Cept. James A. Lovell jr., Fred W. Haise jr. and John L. Swigert jr.

Pope Paul has been an avid follower of space exploits. He has received U.S. astronauts in private audience, including the men from the first moon land-ing. Neil A Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin and Michael Collins.

AQUARIUS: Sbut down.

HOUSTON: Roger, shut down. That was Condr. Jim Lovell reporting shut down. The engine is off. We're at 79 hours 32 minutes into the flight.

HOUSTON: Okay Aquarius, we're working on what's going to happen next. In the meantime, we'd like to take some highpowered stuff off the line.

AQUARIUS: I can't roll the way I want to . . . I really don't know what the combination is . . . all right, I now have pitch and yaw, pitch and roll going into the designated amounts . . . HOUSTON: Stand by a minute . . . the pitch is the important

AQUARIUS: Okay, it's coming down . . . well, I guess I better eat something. Hey, look at this . . . jelly beans. HOUSTON: By the way, Aquarius, we see the results now from the Apollo-12 seismometer. Looks like your booster just : hit the moon and it's rocking it a little bit, over.

AQUARIUS: Well, at least something worked on this flight. HOUSTON: Okay, just some info. We're working up a procedure for you to use command module lithium hydroxide canisters to connect to your hoses, the outlet hoses in the lunar module, so as time passes in the mission you can continue scrubbing the LEM atmosphere.

AQUARIUS: We better start working on that modification HOUSTON: Yes. We wish we could send you a kit and it would be kind of like putting a model airplane together or some thing. As it turns out this contraption will look like a mail box when you get it all put together. AQUARIUS: Just for your information, Houston, during, just prior to going around the moon, we saw a lot of debris that was floating by us. Debris of one rather large piece. Sort of looked wrapping off a line of some sort. It still is with us. HOUSTON: ROPET AQUARIUS: Even after our free return midcourse yesterday.

HOUSTON: Oray, we copy that.

AQUARIUS: Well, willy-nilly, I can't stop that. To roll either way won't do it. AQUARIUS: Are you reading 1640, Houston?

HOUSTON: Roger, we're reading it.

AQUARIUS: Will proceed. Here's our residuals. HOUSTON: Roger, very small.

HOUSTON: Apollo control; 79 hours 33 minutes, 5,707 nautical miles out from the moon at this time. I say that was a good burn. AQUARIUS: Roger. Now we want to power down as soon

HOUSTON: Rog. Understand. AQUABIUS: Suggest maybe that you just read off the circuitbreakers you wanted to power down as you did yesterday for us. HOUSTON: O.K. We have a procedure ready to send up to you here in about two minutes. Let us know when you're all ready to take it.

AQUARIUS: O.K. Houston. Be better to write this on a blank page, Vance, or can we use some portion of the power-down list there in the contingency book that already exists?

HOUSTON: Stand by. Slight delay here, Jim. It'll be a couple of minutes before we read that up to you and we're looking at the contingency checklist power-down and that's on Page 5. You might be getting that out while we get all ready to give

HOUSTON: 79 hours 37 minutes into the flight. Okay, make that power five in the contingency check list, Fred. And let's see in the middle part of the page it starts emergency powerdown and we'll mark that up. We're 79 hours 37 minutes into the flight. Guidance reported that the burn duration was literally right on the money. AQUARIUS: Power five, emergency power down.

HOUSTON: But hold off on it because we might have to start PTC up again here, and that's the point that's being resolved right at the moment, so stand by. AQUARIUS: Okay.

HOUSTON: The term PTC is Passive Thermal Control, is barbeque mode which has been used on previous flights. There's discussion in the control center now as to whether or not we should continue in that mode during the coast phase-in. We're 79 hours 39 minutes into the flight and continuing to monitor. This is Apollo Control Houston.

HOUSTON: Apollo Control, Houston, 79 hours 40 minutes into the mission. We show Apollo-13 at 6,008 nantical miles out from the moon at this time, traveling at a speed of 4,980 feet per second.

"Aquarius, you're looking good," istronaut Vance Brand radioed Apollo-13 from Houston's Manned Spacecraft Center. "You're go at three min-A minute later, Capt. Lovell reported shutdown of the engine. It had fired a full four minutes and increased their speed by almost 1,000 miles an hour. In moments, the space-craft had accelerated to a point where it was more than 7,000 miles from the moon and mov-ing toward earth at a speed of almost 4,000 miles an hour.

While nobody could forecast their chances of making it back to earth safe and sound, Capt. Lovell, Mr. Haise and Mr. Swigert were behaving like men bent on beating the odds. The odds against them came from the fact that they were still forced to fly with the twoman landing draft, Aquarius, after the command craft, Odyssey, lost power and oxygen Monday night. The question facing the crew and the manned space program was whether the landing craft's electricity and oxygen would be enough to keep the crew alive until Friday morning, when they were due to reenter the earth's atmosphere.

"It'e the most critical situa-tion we've faced so far in the manned space flight program in flight," flight director Glynn Lunney said again Wednesday. "We're a long way from home and we have a plan for carry-ing out the rest of the mission, but there's going to be no relax-ation at all, as far as that goes, from now until splash."

There were some fears Tues-day night that the spaceship might be breaking up complete-ly, but space officials maintain-ed their outward calm and dismissed this as pure speculation.

This new alarm was raised when gas and bits of material —including a four-inch-square silvery piece of metal were spotted floating past the win-dows of the lunar module, on the nose of the main ship. A stream of vapor was also seen escaping from the service

"Nobody knows down here if it's the service module break-ing up," a Houston spokesman said. "But even if it was, it wouldn't matter. It's not important anyway. They could jet-tison the module now. They are only maintaining it to improve stability."

up from that way," Mr. Haise told mission control. "It looked like they came from immediately down that way." Mission control checked and replied nothing appeared to be wrong. But the "snowflakes" kept drifting up for several minutes, Mr. Haise said. Houston promised to keep a close eye on instrument readings radioed from the craft in an effort to solve the new mystery. Despite their difficulties, the crew seemed in good spirits. Capt. Lovell observed that when they flew from behind the moon they passed right by the moon's

"It looks like your booster hit the moon and is rocking it a little bit," Mr. Brand said. "Well." Capt. Loveli replied. "at least something worked on this flight."

The crew had shut down everything in the command craft but its alarm system and was managing to work, live, sleep, eat and breathe by keeping the tunnel between the two spacecraft open to circulate the landing craft's oxygen into the command craft. Though they never once space tug could fly to the moon, land there and rescue any astronauts in trouble.

Its other functions would in clude placing satellites in earth orbit and serving them, assembling space bases, chunting other space vehicles into higher or lower orbit, and transporting crews and cargo between space vehicles.

Unlike the proposed space shuttle, a reusable, two-stage craft for relaying crew and cargo from earth into orbit, the space tug would not be able to re-enter earth's atmosphere.

Marion Kitchens, from the Advanced Missions Program office of the Manned Space craft Center here, told reporters that at this stage it was proposed the space tug would have a crew of four.

It would have three or four sections, or modules. For a moon-landing mission it would had watched the space program with a complacency born of repeated success. The memory of the early disaster at Cape Kennedy and the constant reminders from the men of Apollo of the risks involved in each flight had been answered by the string of magnificent performances by craft and crew alike. Even the bolt of lightning that jarred the early minutes of Apollo-12 seemed more a demonstration of the invincibility of our spacecraft than a reminder of impending peril. Then came "e pretty large bang," from a meteorite, or an explosion, or whatever, and suddenly we remember that three men are a long, long way from home, their lives suspended on the slimmest kind of thread. The warnings, the talk of risk and of danger, came flooding back.

Those who are in the Apollo program—the engineers, the pianners, the astronauts themselves—have measured those risks many times. They knew something could go wrong anytime, anywhere. They hoped that when it did the men in the craft or the men in mission control could find a way to avoid disaster. But they had faced up to the possibility that a solotion might not be found, the men might be stranded in space, that men might die-swiftly in a ball of fire or slowly as oxygen ran out. Now the rest of us must face up to these things. The risks the spacemen run are no greater, probably much less, than those we ask men to run daily in Vietnam. But they are merely more public-and more exotic. Since all of us shared the moments of triumph with the astronauts, we must share with them the moments of crisis, moments that they are accepting, and bravely, as a matter of probabilities and possibilities.

What happened out there Monday night is far from the worst situation that the men of Apollo could have encountered, with a difference of a day or so. The same mishap, occurring while two men were on the surface of the moon, would have meant almost certain death, and so would have the eame event, occurring during the trip home after the iunar lander had been jettlsoned. Nevertheless, the situation is still touch and go.

One slight flaw in its equipment might snap the thread on which life depends. Similarly, one slight crack in the heat shield induced by whatever went wrong Monday night could turn that small capsule into an oven as it plunges through the atmosphere at re-entry.

> Thus the line between crisis and tragedy is still very thin. But it has always been so in the world in which explorers live. One slight miscalculation, one mechanical error, one unforeseen interference by nature, one human mistake and Columbus might not heve discovered America, Lindbergh might not have flown the Atlantic, Hillary might not have made it up Mt. Everest, Lindbergh wrote of this in describing his epic flight:

"Looking ahead at the unbroken horizon and limitless expanse of water. I'm struck by my arrogance in attempting each a flight. I'm giving up a continent, and heading out to see in the most fragile vehicle ever devised by man. Why should I be so certain that a swinging compass needle will lead me to land and safety? Why have I been so sure that I can hold the nose of the Spirit of St. Louis on an unmarked point on that uniform horizon and find Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland, and Ireland, and finally an infinitesimal spot on the earth's surface called Le Bourget?

Lindbergh gave up a continent, as the astronauts gave up a planet, because he had msasured the risks and found them reasonable for all the possibility or disaster lurking around the corner—it does so every day for men and nations. So if we are going to applaud the glories, we must confront the dangers along the way. All we can do as that unlikely-looking craft limps back from the moon, is to hope that the men who ride in it and the men in Houston who guide it can find what Lindbergh found.

"Somewhere in an unknown recess of my mind,"-he wrote. "I've discovered that my ability rises and falls with the essential problems that confront me. What I can do depends largely on what I have to do to stay alive and on course,"

WASHINGTON.—The Republicans have a new nominee for the Supreme Court of the United States—Judge Harry A. Bisckmun —and a new "villsin" on the court itself, Justice William O. Douglas. Now that a majority of the Senate has said that Judges Haynsworth and Carswell are not qualified to sit on the Supreme Court, Vice-President Agnew and the Republican leader in the House, Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan, are asking: What about Justice Douglas?

The Vice-President has said on television that the question should at least be examined. Ford is leading what he calls a 'broadbipertisan group" in the instigating impeachment proceed-tions later this year to continue offsetting ings against Douglas. The charge against him is that his latest book, "Points of Rebel-American troops in Germany after June 1971, lion," is said to condone or predict or advocate violent revolution ment expires. But with its forces largely against an all-powerful American equipped. West Germany is reducing arms Establishment which is indifferent to the problems of the poor.

Powerful Lobbies

"Our colleges and universities role again in determining American troop reflect primarily the interests of the Establishment and the status quo . . ." Douglas wrote. one side are powerful lobbles such as the military-industrial complex, the agro-business lobby. and the highway lobby. These have powerful spokesmen. Op posed to them are the poor, the unemployed, and disemployed, and these are not well organized."

Accordingly, Douglas observes, "the use of violence as an instrument of persuasion is therefore inviting and seems to the discontented to be the only effective protest ... We must realize that today's Establishment is the new George III. Whether it will continue to adhere to his tactics. we do not know. If it does, the redress, honored in tradition, is also revolution. . ."

Now, this is a damn silly anslogy—even sillier than suggesting that the universities, which are the center of protest against the Establishment, are somehow subservient to it. My colleague, Wilham F. Buckley fr., and the other editors of the conservative magezine, National Review, are so incensed by these views that they have concluded that "Justice Douglas is clearly not qualified to retain his post on the court," and this is apparently the conclusion of Ford and the others seeking impeachment proceedings. seeking impeachment proceedings.

. Four Convictions Several points should be made about this. First, while the Constitution mentions "high crimes and misdemeanors" as for impeachment, the tradition has been to impeach and convict only 12 officers, most of them judges, have been impeached in our national history and only four of these have been convicted. The only member of the So-preme Court to be impeached by the House was Samuel Chase and he was acquitted by the Senate. Besides, there is very little chance that a House and Senate controlled by the Democrats would vote "articles of impeachment" against Douglas, and nobody knows this better than Ford or

The politics of the case are another matter. It is standard operating procedure for politicians of one party to divert attention from their own shortcomings to the shortcomings of the opposi-tion, and, in the short run, this tactic could turn the fire from Carswell and Eaynsworth Douglas, but in the long run this is probably very bad politics for the Republicans. For unless they can actually impeach and convict Douglas, the only result of their action will be to strengthen his determination stay on the court as long as he lives. There is a strong case, long advocated in this space, for a mandatory retirement provision on the Supreme Court at age 70, but the more the court is politicized the less chance there will be of getting such a provision or persuading Justice Black, at 84, or Justices Harian and Douglas at 71 to retire voluntarily.

Direct U.S. Line to Nasser

By Jesse W. Lewis Jr.

CAIRO.—The main value of As-Joseph J. Sisco's visit to Cairo, which ended Tuesday, may prove to be President Gamal Abdel Nasser's first-hand exposure to American thinking on the Middle East.

That was a major part of Sisco's diplomatic mission in the Egyptian capital: to convey directly to Nasser the U.S. policy on the entire Middle East problem, thus clearing lines of communication between Washington and Cairo.

The visit can be seen as an expression of United States interest in maintaining a dialogue with Cairo when Russian involvement with Egypt is increasing.

Sisco, who strived here Priday, is the highest-ranking American official to see Nasser since Egypt broke diplomatic relations Washington during the 1987 Arab-Israeli war. During three full days of talks here, Sisco met President Nasser, Foreign Minister Mahmond Riad, Nasser's special adviser on foreign affairs Mahmoud Fawzi and other officials.

Sisco's visit is not likely to produce any dramatic breakthrough in the big-power talks or lead im- tegral part of a peace settlement, mediately to a resumption of U.S. not a step toward one.

America's negotiator in the talks with Russia.

Compromise Urged Although details of the Nasser-Sisco conversations were not revealed, Sisco is understood to have emphasized that both Egypt and Israel must compromise to reach a political solution. Sisco is understood to have carried the same message to Tel Aviv. Egypt insists on total withdrawal from "all" territory occupied by Israel in the six-day war, meaning not only the Sinai peninsula but East Jerusalem, Jordan's West Bank and the Syrian Golan Reights. For Egypt, withdrawal must precede any other step toward settlement. place if President Nixon had decided to sell additional Phantoms and other combet aircraft to Israel Though the United States is still Israel's backer, the decision to withhold the Phantoms earned positive marks for America in the Arab world.

Washington has indicated it ready to re-establish diplomatic relations with Egypt, but under-stands Cairo'e reluctance to do so in the absence of some movement toward a settlement. Before Sisco arrived, Egyptian officials emphasized that the in-tiative for the visit came from Washington, not Cairo. It is under stood that that is correct. But the

Fragile Technology

A' sudden crisis aboard Apollo-13, striking during what should have been the safest and most uneventful part of the long and lonely journey to the moon, reminds ue how fragile is our technology and how awful the dangers accepted by the men who venture into space. Indochina Jockeying

It is now perfectly clear that China wants an extension of the Vietnam conflict to all Indochina. For the time being, the White House has chosen to play it "cool." It actually still wanta to hope that things are not that serious and that an extension of the conflict to Laos and Cambodia can still be avoided. This is why the recent French proposals have been received with so much reservation.

President Nixon continues to bet on "an anti-Communist stronghold" in South Vietnam. He believes that he can attain this from the U.S., President Nixon was without being compelled to intervene in Laos and Cambodia. In this perspective, a broader negotiation, with the participation of China, could result only in the crumbling of all his policy. If Laos and Cambodia really flare up, the United States will have no other choice than to become involved for several years in an Indochina war or to accept the international conference which would toll the bell for all its hopes in Southeast Asia, -From Le Figaro (Paris).

Israel and Arab states, in the view of President Nixon, means, therefore, complete air superiority of Israel over the Arab states and full freedom for Israeli planes to range over Arab sides and bomb Arab civilian and military targets

And the fact that such air superiority may be not eliminated but simply reduced or, at worst, confined to the Israeli-occupied Arab areas by the U.A.R.'s SAM-3s, has occasioned "concern" to Mr.

In other words the American President not only supports, in a general sense, Israel's present occupation, rule of Arab lands and smothering of the Palestinian people but, also (judging from Secre-tary Rogers's recent proposals for a peace settlement between Israel and the Arabs) Israel's aggrandizement in the guise of securitymotivated annexations.

The Arabs and the Palestinians who believe that without U.S. support for Israel during the last 25 years they would bave been spared endless misery and suffering, have been, are and will be reacting in manner increasingly detrimental to American interests.

Whatever the internal or external reasons which prompt America's extraordinary support to Israel, future historians will note with amazement the short-sightedness of American policy.

VIENNA - MEETING PLACE OF THE WORLD

The very fect, that Vienna has been chosen as location for the SALT | CONGRESS AND CONVENTION CITY (Strategic Armaments Limitation Telks) confirms more than other facts the outstanding position which this city has gained throughout the two lest decadea as focal point of International meetings, conferences and conventions. While this development has been particularly favoured by neutral Austria's position in the heart of Europe, it reminds of the famous Vienna Congress of 1815.

This city has, indeed, besides offering all technical facilities, an atmosphere recognized to favour international understanding and coopera-tion and has been the location of many world-wide conferences in the isst years, particularly those hald under the euspices of the United Nations such as the 1968 Conference on the Law of Treaties, on Outer

Space and on Road Traffic. it may be recalled, that Vienna has been also chosen to hold head-quarters of IAEA (International Atomic Energy Agency) since 1957 and of UNIDO (UN Industriel Development Organization) since 1967. Due to this development and in order to fecilitate international activities here, the Austrian Government will, together with the City of Vienns, chortly atart construction of a UN-City on the banks of the Danube-river and thereby illustrate how much importance is being attached to continuous international cooperation.

The SALT, undertaken by the United States of America and the Soviet Union, are undoubtedly the major event in the long list of such ventures and possibly the most important of them. This will be illustrated by the place chosen for the opening-ceremony, which will take place today in the famous baroque castle of Belvedere, the very same one, where in 1955 the Austrian State Treaty was signed by the Foreign Ministers of Austrie and of the eignatory big powers. The apirit, which has then prevailed may hopefully inspire the present negotiations. Best wishes for a successful outcome will eccompany the negotiatione which may determine our very future in brightening the perspectives of security and of world peace.

A brief history of the Palais an der Strudelhofstiege

The Palais (bottom picture) wes built in 1873 by Ferdinand Feliner, architect of the Wiener Volketheater, the Ronacher Theatre, and the Academy of Commerce, for Joseph, Knight of Mallmann. Already during construction it was bought by Philipp, Duke of Württemberg. At the turn of the century Count Leopold Berchtold, then Minister of Foreign Affairs of Austria-Hungary, bought the Paleis. In remembrance of him one of the halls was named Berchtold Hall, where in 1914 the ultimetum to Serbia was signed.

The Strudelhofstiege became world femous through the novel bearing the same name by Heimito von Doderer, which was first published in 1951.

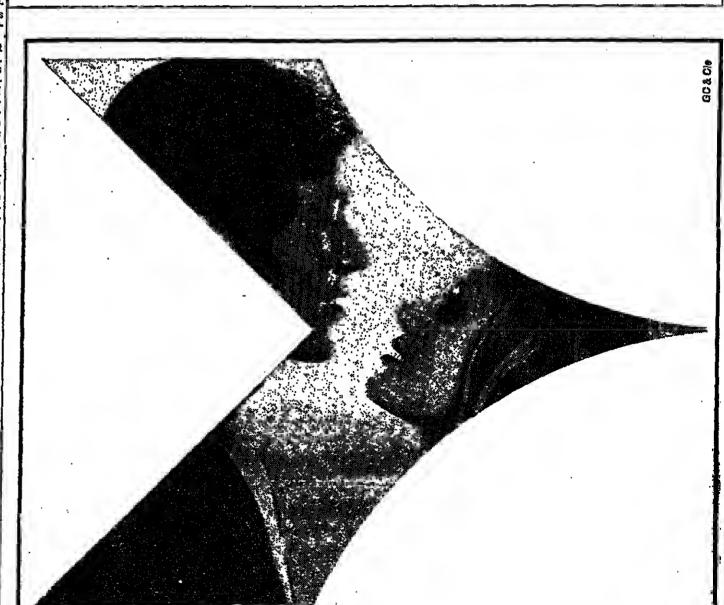

The original Studelhof, built in 1690 by the painter to the imperial court, Peter von Strudel, served after the deeth of the latter as a hospital for plague victims sellor White thanked the Austrian gov- and later on as an orphanege. In 1795 the Strudelhof property was divided and

New Ballets by an Avant-Garde Composer

By David Stevens

PARIS, April 15.—The search for a wider audience makes strange bedfellows, and that seems to be a large part of the explanation for the appearance last weekend in the rather dusty confines of the Opera-Comique of three new ballets set to works by Luciano Berio.

One might think from the catcalls that descended from the gallery after each of the ballets, that it was the avant-garda composer who had reached a new audience, rather than the Salle Favart that attracted a new one. But one can never he sure about these things some of Berio's compositions even in-clude the catcalls as an integral part of the score, and it certainly was neither unexpected nor disturbing to hear them at the second performance on Sat-

Only the final offering of the program, "Laborintus II," is said to have been conceived by Berio as a scenic work, and in the event it was the one that was the most striking, even if it was necessary to rely on the terse program note for the in-formation that it "develops certain themes from Dante's Divine Comedy'." Yet even here it was the work as music that made the strongest impression, with Berio taking his diverse

On the Arts Agenda

The Paris Théâtre des Nations season, somewhat truncated in comparison with previous years, runs this year from May to 29 at the Theatre de France (Odéon) and at the theater of the Tréteaux de France in Les Halles, the former Paris central market. Prague's Theater za Branou presents two productions at the Odéon from May 6 to 16, Chekhov's "Ivanov" and Musset's "Lorenzaccio," both in experimental productions with designs by Josef Svoboda and translations and adaptations by Otomar Krejca, the company's director, Karel Kraus and Josef Topol. These are followed by a Romanian musical comedy, "Madame Chiritza," by Tudor Musatescu, and the Teatro Stabile of Genos with Goldon's "Una delle Ultime Sere di Carnevale." The two productions at Les Halles are Ariosto's "Orlando Furioso," by the Testro Libero of Rome, and "Stomp," by The Combine, a company of former University of Texas students. It is staged by Douglas Dyer, who is said to have conceived the production while staying in a hotel in the Halles area during the events of May-June,

New British Budget Provides Tax Relief for Legitimate Theaters

LONDON, April 15 (NYF).— The legitimate theaters of Britain won a significant tax concession yesterday from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Roy Jenkins. He exempted the production of plays from selective employment tax, a head tax on every employee that is imposed on almost all non-manufacturing industry. A similar concession was made for film production last year.

The step follows a recent report by the Arts Council noting that the commercial theater is having an increasingly hard time, in comparison to the subsidized repertory companies. The report urged some public invest-ment in commercial plays. Relief from S.E.T. will save a large theater in London's West End up to $500 a week. not a huge sum by American standards but certainly signifi-cant here. The cost to the treasury will be just over $1 million a year. Various theater spokesmen said they were delighted. Benard Delfont, an impresario who owns four London and seven provincial theaters, said the cut would "relieve the burden on theaters and renew confi dence in stage presentations.

South opened with one heart and rebid two diamonds when her partner responded one spade. North's second-round jump to four hearts was a slam invitation and suggested a good hand, although perhaps not quite as good as North actually held. Relying on her partner to hold a very substantial hand, South ventured into Blackwood and settled in six hearts when her partner showed three aces. It was not easy for West to know that a diamond lead would be a killer, and she selected the heart jack for reasons of

This solved a minor problem for the declarer, but the major problem of the diamond suit remained.

With a problem suit of this kind the decision should be postponed in the hope that some clues become available. South therefore drew all of South therefore drew an or.

with the spade king and jack.
The appearance of West's queen not only gave South an extra spade trick for a diamond discard but also gave her a clue card but also gave her a clue to the distribution.

West was known to have started with exactly two spades and exactly one heart, which left ten cards in the minor suits. Several of these figured to be in diamonds, for with great chub length West would no doubt have tried a pre-emptive over-

On this basis the "inferior" play of the diamond suit suddenly became attractive. If East was short in diamonds, as South inferred, there was no reason to play her for any honor at all. The declarer therefore led a low diamond from dummy and had no problem at all when East discarded a spade. Even if East had followed suit with a low diamood South would have had excellent prospects of making the slam by taking the ace and leading toward the pear. was deliberately to write a masterpiece—not in the promotional but in the original sense of that word. Eudora Welty built this work on all her years of learning, through seven novels—among them "Delta Wedding" (1946) and "The Ponder Heart" (1954) — and many short stories. In "Losing Battles" Miss Welty intended that we should see rural Mississippi in the middle of the Depression as if we had been born there and grown up in its ways, and she intended at the same time that we should see it entirely within the frame of the traditional novel. She succeeds, but at the sacrifice of exuberance, of that awkward but enormously gratifying waste-fulness which spills from every page of "Moby Dick" or "Leaves of Grass" or Emerson's "Es-says." Miss Welty has taken the form of the novel of manners and deliberately stretched that form to its limit—and not one word farther. Masterpieces, on the other hand, break off huge pieces of language that cannot be catalogued.

LOSING BATTLES

By Eudora Welty. Random House, 436 pp. 17.95. Reviewed by Richard Rhodes

With that said (and not willingly said either), consider the proud bravado of this long work: more than 30 characters at a family retinion, all of them taking turns to talk during a mere two days of actual time spread out over 436 pages; in-tricately interconnected stories of a half-dozen large families spun amidst the frolic and confusion of a long day of picnicking visiting children problems. Faultner carried off this sort of complexity but no one else recently has tried.

The families come together The families come together for their annual reunion to celebrate Granny Vanghn's 90th birthday and to witness the return of her great-grandson Jack. Renfro, due out of jail after a year on a legally correct but locally contested charge of burglary. Jack's wife, Gloria, also waits with Jack's baby, Lady May, whom he has never seen. Grandwhite with Jack's bany, Lady May, whom he has never seen. Grandson Noah Webster Beecham arrives from out of the country with his mail-order bride, Cleo. The others, crowds of parents and children and dogs, come piling out of cars and trucks of every description. Miss Lexie Renfro walks in late, having left behind her charge, Miss Julia Mortimer, bedridden and apparently sentle.

As the stories of the past unfold, the stories of the present begin. Judge Oscar Moody, the same who sent Jack Renfro to jail, is out with his wife in her cherished Butk trying to find his way over back country roads to the remion to read Miss Julia's will to the assembled families. For Miss Julia had left the house soon after Aunt Lexie that morning staggered down the street and died-as if by her death to combat the forces of the reunion, the forces of family ties she has daunt lessly tried to break so that children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren might be free to go out into the modern world. But Mrs. Moody's Buick manages to hang itself on the edge of a cliff with a neighbor boy occupying the back seat and thus maintaining a delicate balance. How Jack Renfro finally

THE PURPOSE, it would aply everyone in the movel and becomes its wildest sequence

Jack loses his battle to set ahead in the world; Gioria his her battle to tear Jack her battle to family, the remine loses its battle to make remines. safe from Miss Julia; Miss Julia loses her battle to-force Ban ner, Mississippi, into the modern world; Aunt Oleo loses ber hattle to defiate the collective family ego; Judge Moody loses his battle to stay aloof from the family's charity: and these are far from being all the losses implied by the title. Yet in the end everyone gains other strengths and other satisfactions even Miss India tions, even Miss Julia.

"Losing Battles" does many things, but one of the things it does best is recapture the sense of kinship that was the strongest force in the settlement of America If we have ever wm. dered how our pioneer ancestor. managed, we need wonder m longer: They stuck together.

Yet the stricture which began this review returns to mind. Because Miss Welty chose to write in the Jamesian tradition (only once in the entire novel, for example, does she use even indirect internal monologue to advance her story), all the characters seem mythological. They know too much, see too much, anticipate events too skillfully—as they must, since they speak and act on the author's behalf. Their authority is a strength, but also a flaw, for it constantly reminds us that the story we are reading is being constructed before our eyes, as Renaissance perspective reminds us that the canvas is after all, flat. "Losing Battles" is an immensely entertaining and brilliantly written antique, to be respected for the purity of its lines, but to be treated with some regard for the fragility of its construction.

Richard Rhodes's study of the Middle West, "The Inland Ground," will be published next fall. He wrote this review for Book World, literary supplement of The Washington Post.

The Old Nixon Returns

WASHINGTON. — I can now reveal why President Nixon made his bitter attack on the Senate after the Judge Carswell defeat. From talking to inside

White House , sources and pulting bits and pieces together. I have learned that this is what happened. Wednesday night after

Carswell had been defeated. everyone in Buchwald Washington had gone to bed except the President at the White House and Martha

Mitchell at the Watergate, who was still trying to rouse someone at the Arkansas Gazette. The President was in a despondent wood and was pacing up and down his bedroom, when out of the clothes closet came the Old Nixon.

The Old Nixon seemed jubi-lant, "Well, you see what happens when you're Mr. Nice

"Oh, go away," the New Nixon sald. "You always come around to gloat when something goes wrong.

The Old Nixon ssid, "You wouldn't listen to me, would you? You wanted to remain above politics, s statesman, a man of all the people. I told you it wouldn't work."

"How could I do otherwise?" "You thought you could let Spire do all the name calling and the mud slinging," the O'd Nixon said. "But it wasn't that essy Dicky."

Nobel Prize-Winner To Head Cannes Jury

PARIS. April 15 (AP).— Miguel Angel Asturias. Guateiu la s ambassodor in Paris sud Nobel litersture prize winner in 1967, will be president of the Cannes film festival jury this year, festival organizer Robert Favre Ls Bret socounced today. The other jurors for the festival next mouth are: German director Volker Schoendorff. American film star Kirk Douglas, Italian director M. Biragbi. Czech director Vojtech Jaany, Sergel Obrasov of the Soviet Union. French producer Christine Gouze-Renal, and French writer Félicien Marceau.

"What can I do now?" the New Nixon protested loudly.

"Rush, you'll wate up Pat." the Old Nixon said. "This is what you can do. You can call the press and say that both Haynsworth and Carswell were victims of vicious assaults on their honesly and racial beliefs because they were from the South. And you can hint that you will make it perfectly clear that anyone who voled against the Carswell spnointment will be treated very roughly by the administration.

"But that's dirty pool." the New Nixoo protested. "Some of the men in the Senate voted "Haven't you learned anything since you've been in the White House?" the Old Nixon shouted, exasperated.

"Now you're going to wake up Pat." the New Nixon said. "Sorry." the Old Nixon sald.
"Look. Dick. What is the most important thing in the whole wide world to you?"

The New Nixon thought for a moment. "Winning the South in Right. And the only way you can do it is by publicly stating tomorrow morning that both your nominees for the Supreme Court were defeated by a concerted effort of civil rights groups and liberals because they were Soutberners."

"Csn't Spiro do that?"

"No", the Old Nixon sald. "The South wants to hear it from you. If you don't show them how mad you personally are, you can watch your whole Southern strategy go up in smoke."

"I can't do it." the New Nixon said. "I'm President of the United States. It would be lowering myself to make the Supreme Court a partisan politicsl issue." "All right," the Old Nixon sald, "If you wou't do it, I'll do

"You?" "Why not? I've been holed up in that damn closet for over a year. Give me a chance. Dick." The New Nixon thought hard for a few moments. "All right." he finally said. "Go ahead, but keep me out of it."

"Thanks, Dick. You won't regret this," the Old Nixon said, slapping him on the back. "Hey, let me borrow your razor. I need a shave before the press con-

Behind a Cab Driver's Tough Talk

By Richard Dougherty

NEW YORK.—'It's a marvelous life," said Robert Weinstock as he wheeled his taxi into Central Park and headed "I wouldn't trade with Rockenorth.

How long, he was asked, had he been driving R cab in New York? "How long?" he replied out of the side of his mouth. "After one day, it's too long."

Everything else changes in the oation's biggest city-much of it for the worse in recent years. But the stereo-typed image of the New York cab driver as epitomized by Mr. Weinstock seems to go on and on. The New York cabble is a figure of legend: the wise gur, the tough talker, the cynic. The man who must always have the last word.

But, the bushy-haired, quick-tongued Mr. Weinstock to the contrary-"sixteen years at this business. I gotta be menill"-change is beginning to make itself felt on the New York taxi driver. According to J. Martin Seidenfeld, a psychologist who has served as a consultant to the taxi industry here for the past year, the stereotype was always misleading. As time goes by, Mr. Seldeuleld contends, it will become even

Unconscious Need

Behind the talkative, hard-bitten facade of the New York cab driver, Mr. Seldenfeld says, lies an unconscious need to be cared for and admired by a father-figure. The whole performance of the worldly philosopher and expert-on-everything is, in other words, little more than a device to hide a desire to impress the customer.

Mr. Seldenfeld, who was hired by the Metropolitan Taxi Cab Board of Trade -an association of fleet owners-to improve personnel practices and driver recrulting, has uncovered other characteristics in his studies.

He has found, for example, that "to significant degree," the ordinary New York taxi man comes from a largerthan-usual family and tends to be an older brother. This makes for a psradox in which the cabbie's pose as a thick-skinned, highly independent character goes haod lo hand with an older sibling's deep-rooted inclination to take "good care of baby brother and sister."

The best way to get on friendly terms with even the grouchiest driver, it follows, is to ask for his belp or advice-"Appeal," in Mr. Seidenfeld's words, "to need to be helpful."

"They proclaim their independence, but take orders from anyone who steps into their cabs."

Desire to impress?

Thirty or more years ago, according to Mr. Seidenfeld, the vast majority of taximen in New York were first-generation Irish, Jewish and Italian boys-products of poor immigrant oeighborhoods like the Lower East Side where toughness and wit were essectial to survival. Much of the humor of cab drivers, Mr. Seidenfeld believes, still shows the influence of the Jewish humor of those early immigrant years - somewhat self-mocking, keenly aware of the ridiculous in buman affairs

In recent years, however, a later immi-grant wave has moved in and the old ethnic order is giving way to the Puerto Rican and the Negro who has come up from the South. There are also 500 women among the nearly 30.000 holders of licenses to drive cabs in the city. This all suggests that Mr. Weinstock and his type may be vanishing.

But Mr. Seidenfeld has somewhat to his surprise, found that the "underlying psychological mechanisms" among black and Puerto Rican drivers who are full-time, long-term taximen are identical with those of the earlier generation.

Behind the facade: "A need to be cared for."

Almost invariably, the psychologists' studies have shown, the new men are "older siblings from larger-than-average families"; they express their "repressed need to be cared for by taking care of others": and "they proclaim their inde-pendence and toughness but take orders from virtually anyone who steps into their cabs."

Aside from personality traits, of course, there is the fact that New York itself helps shape the manners and attitudes of the average driver.

Passenger Complaints

More than 6,800 passenger complaints of driver rudeness or refusal to go to a distant destination were made last year to the police department's back bureaua substantial rise from the previous year. (A figure which could be thought "re-markably low." says Mr. Seidenfeld, when measured against the fact that about a million riders s day are accommodated by the 11.787 taxis in the city.)

Traffic congestion is the most frequently voiced complaint of the cabby because it slows him down and reduces the business he can do. But crime is another major source of concern. Fear of assault and robbery is, according to taxi industry spokesmen, a chief element in the wariness and suspicion of drivers -particularly at night.

Cabbles point with alarm to police figures that show taxi holdups here to be sharply on the rise-averaging 130 a month last year as compared to 90 a month the year before.

Turnover is high among drivers who are new to the trade, according to Mr. Seidenfeld, but remains low among veterans like Robert Weinstock-crime. traffic and relatively low pay ootwithstanding. Most cabbles average around $3,500 a year with tips.

A kind of "automatic elimination pro-cess" goes on Mr. Seidenfeld says, through all the fears and irritations and frustrations of the work.

While a man's economic situation may keep him in a job for a while, in the long run the generalization is valid; People work where their deepest needs find satisfaction.

In the course of the ride through Central Park, Mr. Seidenfeld's observations were relayed to cab driver Weinstock. He was not impressed.

"A head shrinker," he said. "So what does he know?"

a consideration dictated by his salary as high-school chemistry teacher in a town outside Lagos, Nigeria, but mainly as a practical means of transportation in which he plans to drive-alonefrom Paris to Lagos next month. Having made the trek several times. Bruce regards it as something less than a big deal, though not without its minor inconveniences. "There's only one dicey stretch," he admitted to a pretty young thing at dinner last night, "about a thousand miles across the Sahara Desert. No road, of course, but there's quite a few vehicle tracks to keep you pointing the right way. Considering the heat, you sleep by day and drive at night." "But said the pretty young thing, fairly aghast at the whole project, "suppose you run into a dune or a drift or something?" "You do," said the 33-year-old Briton, "but you just go like hell and hope to ride it out. If you get bogged down, you get out the wire mesh and put it under the wheels. You can go only about two yards at a time before you have to stop aod move up the mesh. It requires E little patience and work but you get out all right. "Yes," said
